

Ukraine Nature Network

Online, May 15th - 13:00-15:00 PM (CET)

The event will focus on the environmental consequences of the Russian war against Ukraine and the role of international support in addressing them. Speakers from international organizations will discuss their involvement in environmental research, protection, and recovery efforts, emphasizing their global significance. The discussion will also include insights from a ministry representative on how international support for Ukraine's environmental protection has evolved over the past three years. Additionally, the Ukrainian researcher will discuss financial sources for nature conservation in the context of war, highlighting reparations as one of them. This event is an initiative by RCE and Green Office, supported by the DBU.

The event will be conducted in English and registrations are free of charge.
